

I have made contact with one of my wife's cousins who she met about 25 years ago but I have never met tells me that she has a photograph of her great grandmother and has sent me copy which makes a link between her parent's families. The children always teased her because her one cousin was both her first and second cousin - very Lincolnshire!

I have also found a certificate of my Father-in law to say he had completed the appropriate number of school attended to start work at twelve. Which I have only seen once before and I will bring it with when we eventually meet!
